

1. Acids react with carbonates to make carbon dioxide. This is a neutralisation reaction.

2. Carbon dioxide gas turns limewater milky.

3. Limestone, marble and chalk are made from calcium carbonate, so they react with acids. This means that they wear away because of the acids in the surroundings.